The Master of Arts degree in Marriage and Family Therapy (MMFT) at Pfeiffer University’s Graduate School is offered at both the Charlotte and Raleigh-Durham campuses and provides the clinical and academic training required for becoming a licensed therapist working with individuals, couples and families in a variety of professional settings. The curriculum, which requires 66 hours and usually takes 3-4 years to complete (contingent on a full-time or part-time commitment), includes clinical training that focuses on developing ethical therapy skills, increasing professionalism and building community partnerships.

One of only three COAMFTE (Commission on Accreditation for Marriage and Family Therapy Education) accredited programs in North Carolina, Pfeiffer’s two locations offer training with faculty who are licensed marriage and family therapists and AAMFT approved supervisors (American Association for Marriage and Family Therapy). The curriculum meets the academic and experiential requirements for state licensure as a marriage and family therapist (LMFT) in North Carolina and prepares students for the national examination in marital and family therapy (AMFTRB).
