RE: LCMHC Counselor Licensure

For the following Licensed Clinical Mental Health Counselor: Robert Michael Cox

This letter verifies that the person listed above is a Licensed Clinical Mental Health Counselor in North Carolina, holding the license number 4057 is active and in good standing at this time. The above listed licensee was granted a license (or certificate of registration as a Registered Practicing Counselor if the date is prior to July 1, 1994) to practice counseling in North Carolina on 7/1/2002.

Date of next renewal: 6/30/2022

For your information, the Licensed Professional Counselors Act (Article 24 of the North Carolina General Statutes) which defines the practice of counseling and the exemptions for mandatory licensure became effective July 1, 1994. Prior to that time, Registered Practicing Counselor was a credential that could be obtained voluntarily. RPC's were governed by the North Carolina Board of Registered Practicing Counselors. The LPC Act grandparented RPC's upon the development submittal of a Professional Disclosure Statement.

This letter serves as Renewal & Verification of Active Licensure. For further information please visit: www.ncblcmhc.org or contact the Board office and the number listed above.

Special Skills

My ability to train/coach and or lead others is above average. My effectiveness is in my intuition to challenge and empower people to move forward, take risks and to overcome obstacles. The driving motivation in my work is impact and empowerment.... to see others win.

Interests

The majority of my free time is with my wife, two sons and daughter. Family matters most to me and you can see this in how I make decisions and where I invest my time. I enjoy reading and listening to podcasts/sermons/ideas of how to be a healthier human being and have positive, meaningful relationships. I grew up playing sports and really enjoy watching and competing in both team and individual activities.

RIGHT TRACK

Intern

The RIGHT (Research Investigating Growth and Health Trajectories) Track Research Project focuses on the development and developmental trajectories of early disruptive behavior. This research is funded by National Institute of Mental Health and is conducted in collaboration with Dr. Susan Calkins and Dr. Susan Keane of the Psychology Department, and Dr. Marion O'Brien of the Department of Human Development and Family Studies. This study is examining the contextual, familial, and child characteristics that may contribute to early academic and social success versus challenging disruptive behavior.

AAFACT, African American Families and Children Together

Fall 2007

Intern

AAFACT was a study that aims to understand the processes by which single mothers raise strong and healthy children. Participating families took part in two interviews, and all information collected was private and confidential. In addition to being compensated, interested and eligible families were advised that they were contributing to community development and future prevention efforts. "AAFACT was under the leadership of Dr. Deborah Jones, Ph.D.

RE: LCMHC Counselor Licensure

For the following Licensed Clinical Mental Health Counselor: Deborah Sue Lung

This letter verifies that the person listed above is a Licensed Clinical Mental Health Counselor in North Carolina, holding the license number 6602 is active and in good standing at this time. The above listed licensee was granted a license (or certificate of registration as a Registered Practicing Counselor if the date is prior to July 1, 1994) to practice counseling in North Carolina on 6/1/2007.

Date of next renewal: 6/30/2022

For your information, the Licensed Professional Counselors Act (Article 24 of the North Carolina General Statutes) which defines the practice of counseling and the exemptions for mandatory licensure became effective July 1, 1994. Prior to that time, Registered Practicing Counselor was a credential that could be obtained voluntarily. RPC's were governed by the North Carolina Board of Registered Practicing Counselors. The LPC Act grandparented RPC's upon the development submittal of a Professional Disclosure Statement.

This letter serves as Renewal & Verification of Active Licensure. For further information please visit: www.ncblcmhc.org or contact the Board office and the number listed above.
